THANK YOU!

Every day we get letters—
letters to Weekly Reader, Weakly Reader, Weely Reader, and Weekly Read!

Neat letters with careful wording, perfect spelling;
smudged, labored letters with doubtful words;
flowing letters with "creative" spelling.
(The writers have something to say and don't let spelling get in their way.)

Letters sharing experiences with Andy—describing a science discovery, telling how to be good citizens;
letters with kindly worded criticism calling attention to an error.

Letters that ask questions—
thoughtful questions sparked by curiosity, foolish questions asked for the sake of asking,
and—sometimes—questions we can't answer.

Letters that make us smile—
that we quote to colleagues up and down the hall;
letters that give us a pang
to be once again in the classroom.

We couldn't do without these letters. Simple, refreshing, eloquent, they give us glimpses of the pupils in our 50-state classroom. They let us know how topics have been received, and how My Weekly Reader stimulates the thinking of seven-year-olds. Letters stimulate us to do better, and they help to make us proud of serving you.
